The annual summer design workshop, which rotates among five Asian countries, was held in Japan this year. It took place over 12 days: in Tokyo (21st–25th) and Hakodate (26th–31st). More than 100 students from Japan, Thailand, Korea, and Singapore participated, forming 15 groups to explore the theme of overtourism. Through on-site research, they proposed a variety of ideas addressing issues related to tourism in Japan. Many of the proposals offered interesting perspectives from an international point of view. Next year's workshop will be held in Taiwan.
